Be prepared: Stay compliant with ever-changing federal, state, and local COVID-19 reporting regulations.

Make sure your organization is in compliance with new outbreak reporting regulations going into effect in California and Virginia, with additional states expected to adopt a similar policy. If there is an outbreak (3 or more exposures at a single location within 14 days), employers will be required to report this information to state OSHA offices and communicate the outbreak to employees. Origami's Outbreak Tracking Solution enables organizations to tackle these expanding challenges while remaining compliant.

Features:

- Monitor exposures: allow employees to easily report COVID-19 incidents

- Identify and receive notification of an outbreak: 3 or more cases occuring in a single location within a 14 day period

- Track reporting to relevant parties, including employees, facility managers, local health department, and state OSHA*

- View statistics on outbreaks and exposures by location

Benefits:

- Leverage easy-to-use reporting tools and automation without the need to track exposures and incidents manually or with spreadsheets

- Utilize notifications and a centralized system to stay on top of outbreak reporting and communications

- Gain visibility into outbreaks by location, enabling you to intervene to improve the health and safety of employees and mitigate liabilities

*OSHA does not currently support electronic reporting of COVID-19 cases, therefore Origami does not report outbreaks electronically to OSHA or local health authorities. This must still be done manually by the client.
